Dear Mr McCulloch,

A huge personal thank you from myself and the entire team here at Macmillan! Your gift of £10.00 was so kind and very gratefully received. Thank you for also letting us know we can claim gift aid – this means your donation will go even further.

It means everything to know there are compassionate people like you out there – especially during these still uncertain times. You clearly understand that we won't rest, and we won't settle for anything other than the best support for people with cancer.

It's not always easy though. As I mentioned in my previous letter, there are 3 million people living with cancer in the UK. Not only that, but the COVID-19 pandemic has led to a sharp drop in our fundraising income.

However, with brilliant people like you by our side, I know we'll make it through. That's what folk do, don't they? Rally round, pull together and do everything they can. It's what Faiq did, Minha's lovely cousin.

When Minha sadly passed away, Faiq was determined to do something special in her memory. So he decided to run 734km – the number of days that Minha's cancer journey lasted. But he didn't do it alone. His challenge captured the imagination of family, friends and even his teachers. Soon they were all taking part and raising money for Macmillan.

Thank you again for getting behind us, Mr McCulloch. I know that families like Minha's are incredibly grateful for the support we give, and that's why we're incredibly grateful to you for making it all possible.

Carole,
Macmillan nurse

Dear Mr McCulloch,

Thank you so much!

It is really amazing to know that there are such kind, caring people out there, helping Marie Curie to care for families like mine.

When Nurse Andrea wrote to you, asking for your help, she told you about the difference Marie Curie has made to my family and how my dad was looked after at the wonderful Marie Curie Hospice, West Midlands. Thank you for giving a gift in memory of your loved one, it will mean that more families like mine will be able to turn to Marie Curie at the most awful time in their lives.

I can tell you that your kindness will mean the absolute world to someone like me.

I'd imagined a hospice would be a depressing and very sad place. It feels strange to say it was actually lovely there. But it was – everyone was so friendly, welcoming. Dad had his own big room. Nurses like Andrea couldn't do enough to make him comfortable. And they were always checking with me, Mum, my brother and sisters to ask how we were too. It felt like they cared about us just as much as they did Dad.

Having counsellors, like Ann, at the hospice was also amazing. Ann has been there for me from the horrible moment I heard that Dad was going to die. And I've visited the hospice ever since to see her for counselling. I just don't know how I would have coped without this. Ann is used to working with children and young people who are going through grief so she really knows how to help.

I hate to think of another family having to go through what we did. But because of kind people like you, it is very comforting to know that someone like Dad and my family will get all the support and care that we did from Marie Curie.

Thanks again,

Hannah Moloney

PS I hope you like the calendar Andrea sent you. You can post photos of your bakes at #mariecuriebakers. I will be having a go at some of the recipes too and sharing my pictures 😊

Dear Mr McCulloch,

Summer is now in full flow, and your kind donation of £10 has brightened my day. Thank you so much for continuing to support the wonderful work we do in The Salvation Army. Your response to my appeal letter means so much to us and I would like you to know just how much your thoughtfulness and kindness is appreciated.

First, it is so warmly appreciated by all of us here in The Salvation Army who deliver frontline services to some of the most in need, isolated and underprivileged people in towns and cities across the UK. As I said in my appeal, for as long as there is suffering and poverty, we will fight. We never want to be in a position when we have to say, 'I'm sorry, I can't help you'. Your gift means we have been able to deliver help and hope to someone in need. That's what we are here for and that's why you are so very much appreciated.

Secondly, if you saw the look – and the words - of gratitude and appreciation from so many people we help every day, you'd be reminded just how much your support, in our hands, means to people who have so little. People with no food, no company or no hope. Tackling these problems is what we do every day. Your thoughtfulness and support enable us to do that.

Therefore, I hope when you read this letter, you not only feel the warmth of my thanks, but you also can see why your donation has been a real ray of sunshine for me and how in turn, we have been able to 'scatter a little sunshine' in the lives of people who need it.

Yours sincerely,

Dean Pallant

Thank you for thinking of people living with a terminal illness

Dear Mr McCulloch,

I'm writing because I wanted to thank you personally for your generous gift of £10.00 in response to the summer edition of by our side. It was very kind of you.

This is a really difficult time for us all, so the fact that you are thinking of people living with a terminal illness and doing so much to help them get the care they need is incredibly inspiring to the Marie Curie Nursing Team. We can only do what we do, because of you.

For the people I care for and their families, there's now even greater anxiety and the added worry they might catch or pass on the virus. This can sometimes feel overwhelming and that's why I am especially grateful to you. Your support at this time means my fellow nurses and I can continue to be there for the families who need us, and right now they need us more than ever.

Thank you again for your generosity, your compassion, and for helping families through the most difficult few weeks of their lives.

With my very best wishes for you and your loved ones,

Dawn Dyne
