Dear Mr McCulloch,

Thank you so much for your incredibly generous donation of £10.00 to RNID. Your donation means so much to people like June and will help towards funding research into treatments to improve hearing for so many.

Your gift is so important – it's a vital step in discovering life-changing hearing treatments. I know your generosity will give hope to June that one day better treatments will mean she's able to join in properly on Christmas day. Really hearing all the excitement and not just hearing snippets and seeing it on her grandchildren's faces.

It's not just research where your donation will make a difference. With your help, together we'll make life fully inclusive for deaf people and those with hearing loss or tinnitus. We campaign for an inclusive society. We connect people to practical advice and pioneer new treatments for hearing loss and tinnitus.

None of this is possible without you. Thank you again for your special gift this Christmas. It's so appreciated and we're all incredibly thankful.

With best wishes,

Ralph Holmes
Executive Director of Research

Dear Mr McCulloch

Thank you so much for your generous gift of £10. Together, we're not only saving children's lives, we're helping them see the magic and wonder in the world again.

'When I see my sister happy and healthy I'm happy for her!' These are the words of Fatun, whose baby sister Fatima you read about in our letter. When Fatima arrived at the health clinic, she was given treatment for severe malnutrition. But after 10 days, she was healthy enough to go home to her family.

Now more than ever children here in the UK and around the world need our help. We know these are tough times for everyone, so we're even more grateful for your support.

Your gift will help us reach other children like Fatima so that they can grow, play, learn and go on to build a better future.

Thank you once again!

Yours Sincerely

Will Lauder

Dear Mr McCulloch,

What a warm and welcome joy it was to receive your donation of £10 the other day. Your kindness and thoughtful generosity were a real boost to us – a bit like a bright, summery spell on an autumn day! Thank you so much for supporting my recent appeal for funds. It means a lot. I'm sorry it has taken a little while to send you this letter.

Actually, it means more than 'a lot'. For the people who turn to us for help, your donation means we will be able to offer hope, practical support, friendship and sometimes, a fresh start in life. In my appeal newsletter, I gave many examples of just how The Salvation Army is supporting some of the most needy, isolated and vulnerable people in communities across the UK.

We go about our work joyfully and with a positive spirit, we thrive on busy days and especially in recent months, finding new ways to meet the day-to-day challenges people have. The one thing we have been reminded of is just how important our work is to so many people and just how much we are needed. The wonderful fact that people like you continue to recognise this is truly heart-warming. You are indeed a real and dependable friend to the Salvation Army. Thank you for your support, for wanting to help us in our daily mission of caring, of relieving suffering and bringing friendship to the people who need us the most. Whatever you get up to today, be assured of my warm thanks and generous appreciation of your kindness.

With my sincerest thanks,

Dean Pallant

Dear Mr McCulloch,

Thank you. Thank you. Thank you!

I'm sorry, but I just can't say it enough. Your generous gift of £20.00 to Macmillan was very gratefully received. It was like a lovely early Christmas present – to help this amazing charity reach even more people with cancer over the festive season. Thank you for also letting us know we can claim gift aid – this means your donation will go even further.

I know my letter talked about uncertainty. Of not knowing what might lie around the next corner. But when a wonderful gift like yours arrives, that's one surprise that's very much appreciated!

Macmillan is obviously a charity that's close to your heart. I don't know what it means to you personally, but for me it's often just knowing their wonderful staff are there. They might not literally be able to hold your hand at the moment, but they are finding new ways to give that same precious reassurance. And that's especially important over Christmas and into the New Year.

Whether a person with cancer is on their own, or surrounded by family members, I know it can be an incredibly lonely time of year. You can't allow yourself to get in the spirit of things when there are nagging questions and doubts spinning around your head.

But that's the point. With your help, people don't have to go through it by themselves. Macmillan can still be with them – even in these incredibly uncertain times. They can pick up the phone and share their worries or questions on the Support Line. Or look forward to a weekly call from a Telephone Buddy, a brilliant new service that's proving a real lifeline to so many.

So thank you again Mr McCulloch – from me, everyone at Macmillan and all the people they help.

Sophia

Dear Raymond

Thank you so much for your support this year. Without you, Starlight really couldn't have reached as many seriously ill children and their families as we did.

It's been a difficult year for all of us and we at Starlight have needed to make many changes to ensure we deliver play and distraction, fun and entertainment to seriously ill children in and out of hospital. I've recorded a brief review of 2020 to tell you about some of the remarkable people we've worked with and the changes that my team have made to make this year as successful as possible.

Your donations and support have been so important; more so than ever. We're looking forward to better days in 2021 for Starlight children and their families. But for now, merry Christmas to you and your family and I wish you a very happy new year.

Best wishes,

Cathy Gilman
